In many Canadian communities, families are struggling to make inclusive education a reality for their child. Those who do need support – from – other families; parent associations both local and provincial; rights and advocacy groups.

Among the issues: placement; individual plans; curriculum choices; accommodations; attendance; school and classroom culture; teacher attitude; parental participation and partnership; and more

Inclusive Education Canada has invited a panel experienced in helping parents and families with these issues

How might this support best be provided? What strategies are effective. Are there – do's and don'ts? Are we doing enough? What more could be done?
